examined it and found a bullet hole in the right breast near the 6th rib. The bullet had entered the chest; could not find any trace of the bullet or the clothes or person of deceased, so marks of burning were seen—saw no spots on his chin; the bullet entered between the 5th and 6th ribs and passed up the right lung, through the upper part of the liver and out of the back and slightly touched the spine chord. The cause of death was the bullet wound; death was no doubt instantaneous. The hands were pale; he had fallen when his father shot him; but he was not wounded at the back, bleeding was all internal. A person would be as he was, it would have been impossible for him to have placed the gun in the position in which it was found. The marks were the only ones found; death was no doubt instantaneous.
